Terpenes are building blocks that naturally occur in most plant essential oils. They have a multitude of medicinal properties including stimulating the immune system, anti-viral, anti-fungal and many other beneficial effects. Because terpenes are so powerful, it's important to know they are also highly concentrated. One essential oil bottle may only hold several drops. There are many benefits to using essential oils diluted. Here's an example of what can be achieved in a diluted form compared to a concentrated one. Find out the best oils for each part of your body. Your skin benefits greatly from a regular spa, but it's also among the easiest body parts to treat. Simply massage a few drops of your favorite essential oils into the skin whenever you feel like it. By diluting them down, you're putting yourself in a safer, longer-term position. Diluting increases the skin's absorption rate and makes you less likely to accidentally ingest them. Diluted essential oils can be used in a number of ways. Massage with a drop or two on a cotton ball, baby oil, or carrier oil Create a hot compress with a drop or two Use diluted essential oils as a mask Add them to homemade soap and lotion recipes Choose healthy oils for massage Herbal remedies are made up of essential oils that have been prescribed by a doctor. These oil-based medicines are very different from our other (non-oil) skin care products. They generally contain small amounts of oil and very few other ingredients. They are often quite strong and effective at treating skin conditions. Massage an essential oil onto your skin to stimulate circulation, stop skin inflammation, and reduce pain. You may also be able to treat a variety of skin infections with a few drops. Hot compress Most essential oils are highly concentrated, and a few drops added to a jar of baby oil and a few drops of eucalyptus oil make an excellent hot compress. The purpose of a hot compress is to increase circulation and provide some relief from pain. You can also use it for some other things, like easing muscle spasms. You can make a hot compress by combining the oils in the jar, covering it with plastic wrap, and placing it in a warm oven for a few minutes. Don't let it get too hot. If it starts to brown, then first-order phase transition by temperature increase and explored the effect of chirality of edge atoms on the transport properties of edge states. The edge states were proved to be spin degenerate and exhibit a topological transition as the spin orientation of the magnetic edge atoms is reversed. The spin-degenerate edge states present the same transport properties as the non-degenerate edge states, such as the topological quantum yield and transconductance. As the temperature reaches the first-order phase transition temperature, the conductance of degenerate edge states shows its peak. By tuning the electron energy, the number of scattering states in the system, the spin configuration of edge atoms and the exchange splitting between the edge atoms, we have studied the modification to the first-order phase transition. The magnetoresistance of our system does not change at the first-order phase transition.
