1. Open an image file for work. Any raster or vector image will do. Make sure that you have at least one layer for this image so that you can see it with transparency. 2. On the top menu, choose Edit → Preferences. The Preferences dialog box appears. 3. In the General section, select no behavior for Click and Double-Click. You don't need to use the images-and-printing shortcut keys. You can use the mouse and the following keyboard commands instead: * Photoshop : Click the down arrow next to it and select Layer. From the Layers panel menu, choose Layer. In the Layers dialog box, the image's existing layers appear. * Windows : Click the down arrow next to the photo thumbnail and select Edit. In the Edit dialog box, select Layers and choose New Layer.

Reasons to switch from Photoshop to Photoshop Elements Easier to Use From Photoshop Elements, you can easily save your work as Portable Document Format (PDF) files, print your work, add annotations to images and crop images. No Layer Masks With no layer masks, you cannot view the contents of other layers, so your original images retain their original data without disturbing other layers. Load High-Resolution Images With no minimum or maximum image size, you can load full-resolution images without affecting your system. More Useful Plug-Ins and Tools The plug-in palette allows you to add and use plug-ins with your image. With the tools available, you can easily enlarge, reduce or crop images, remove unwanted elements, and perform color corrections. Photon Version Photoshop Elements 12 is also available as Photon, which is available as a separate application. Photon is a virtual machine that combines Photoshop with Photoshop Elements for easy editing and a simplified workflow. Q: divs are just stacked on top of each other rather than appear as they should I'm creating a black and white photo slideshow. Right now I can't get the divs to stack correctly, but rather appear to be on top of each other. It is currently about a 7 inch radius and I want it to fill the screen (when the browser is loaded). I tried nesting the divs inside of a container div, but the slideshow still appears as the container instead of the actual photos:

What's New in the?

Yes, the cellular industry is (finally!) becoming a viable medium for true streaming audio. Rather than relying on outmoded technology like landline telephones and simple POTS, the folks over at Serato have managed to tap into the power of the cell networks and the latest smartphones to bring a new way of listening to music. By connecting your mobile device directly to the Serato-powered platform running on your laptop or desktop, you'll be able to receive digital music directly from over 250 million Internet radio stations in the U.S., Europe and Asia. While portable (or wireless) music is already a valid use case for Apple's iPhone, this is the first time any tech company has created a dedicated music streaming application for Android smartphones. With a little work, you should be able to use your Android handset as your primary music listening device, even if your laptop is home or the office. The included app will work with any handsets running 2.2 and later versions of the operating system. Even though the app works with the latest version of the device, you'll be able to choose from a variety of sources for your music rather than the current situation of having to go through one of the handful of carriers that support 3G streaming. The official website for the app, released today, lists some of the major music providers that will be supported in the near future. "We are in talks with every major music service currently available," say Serato. "The key advantages of using Serato is that we get the exposure of the Serato Live Stage, and the speed, reliability and convenience of this solution compared to a data connection." For now, the company supports even cheaper providers, like last.fm and Grooveshark, which charge a per-track fee for streaming. Serato's site makes it quite clear that the company's streaming service is still in beta and that there are several limitations and glitches that you may encounter. Also, the announcement's FAQ makes it clear that the streaming service requires an Internet connection in order to work; that's about the only thing you need to watch out for at the moment. The app doesn't include the Serato Party mode, which is unique to the company's client for Internet radios. "The Party mode is a unique feature of Serato.com that combines the Serato Live Stage, Groove and the Apple iPhone, allowing users to control all of these user accounts from one device," said the Serato site.
