This is a very important application for all iOS-devices. It will clean all the debris and junk files that might be stored in your memory, making your iPhone or iPad work as new again. By removing such items, the device can perform its functions more efficiently. In addition, the device will not experience crashes and also will stop being recognized by computer. In the case of iOS devices, it is more complicated because the internal memory is filled with junk files which can cause the device to crash whenever some applications are being accessed. This can take place even when the device is turned off. The activity of the device will be delayed, and it will also stop responding to all commands. By running The Crash Cleaner on your iOS device, you will automatically resolve this. This application is specifically designed for iOS devices, it works perfectly in all versions of all operating systems, including iOS 8.x or 7.1.0 NOTE: To delete the cache files of the installed applications that are stored in the "Documents" folder on your iOS device, you need to uninstall the applications. For information on how to delete the cache files, visit this link: Features: - Automatic removal of all the junk files that can slow down your iPhone, iPad or iPod. - Locate and delete the cache files of your installed applications - Delete the junk files that can cause crashes and/or slowdowns - Restore the device's memory so that it is able to operate at full potential and be recognized by your computer - Restores the performance of the device and makes it able to work even when it is turned off - Restores the functionality of the apps that are on the device - Improve the speed of the device in all its aspects - Does not remove your files from your computer - No rooting required - Requires iOS 6.0 or higher System Requirements: - Minimum iOS version 6.0 - Supported devices: iPad, iPhone and iPod Additional information: The home page of this application can be accessed by simply tapping on the icon on your home screen." Stratfor is a private, for-profit organization specializing in geopolitical analysis. Founded in 1996, it is privately owned and funded by its founder and executive chairman, George Friedman, a former diplomat and writer for the New York Times. Unlike traditional research groups, Stratfor analyzes data in a different way, focusing on the geopolitical implications of information. Stratfor uses rigorous and original analytic methods, and, according to its authors, does not simply regurgitate data, but instead aims to clarify underlying trends and issues. Stratfor describes its analysis as "geopolitical forecasting," a business application of mathematics and statistical analysis. According to Friedman, this methodology has proven to be very accurate in the past. Most of Stratfor's staff are corporate veterans, and they tend to work closely with the company's information providers, generally governments or intelligence agencies. The service receives government and corporate contracts, and its staff are permitted to share in the company's profits. The company's principal office is in Austin, Texas. The firm's name is derived from the Greek words στρατηγός (strategos), meaning "general" or "commander," and σύνταξη (syntaxis), meaning "recollection" or "organization." Stratfor is both a registered trademark and an acronym. About 50% of the subscribers are located in the US, and about 30% in the UK, Japan and Canada. The service is particularly strong in the area of international business, in particular in the Asia-Pacific region. Although Stratfor has had a number of articles on the most relevant issues of the day published in the New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, the San Francisco Chronicle and other major publications, it is still a very small operation. It is notable that the company does not claim to possess inside information on the intentions of governments or corporations, but instead claims that it only uses publicly available information. We often come across companies that are building awesome prototypes for a new way of handling payments, and wonder how they'll be able to compete in the real world. We think that there are very important benefits of having mobile, instant, anonymous, and completely free payments, and think it's just a matter of time until they become a reality. After all, SMS messaging is now a fact of life, and the only thing people have to make it a reality is a working cell phone

What's new:

Sinking Simulator is a sandbox-like game in which the player pilot four vehicles. The main goal is to explore the world map by land and sea, find sunken treasures and places of interest, and open chests full of loot. Sinking Sims is released every Sunday and Monday on itch.io for free. It is available for Windows, Linux, Mac OS X and iOS. The game can be played online or offline. Once you have finished the game, you can earn achievements for completing various tasks. One of the most important tasks is to finish as many different vehicles as possible. By doing so, you can unlock new speed and other abilities of the player's ship. The game's progress is saved and the information is saved on the cloud. There are several places to store data, such as the local cloud, online cloud, among others. Every player has one to four lives, which are used to suspend their character. The game has got an intuitive user interface. It is easy to control and navigate through all areas. Learning and practicing are the path to mastering the game. You can practice by making deaths, searching for rare items, and everything else. There are other ways to practice, for example, by earning money by finding some of the unusual elements. In all versions of the game, there is a tutorial. It will guide you through all features of the game. Every day, there is a new list of challenges and other offers, which will keep players engaged. Players can build and configure their own server. It is possible to configure server settings and upload content to it. You can also adjust settings of your own server. The creation editor is also available. There you can write your own levels and stories. More complex creations are supported by scripting languages like JavaScript and Lua. Players can create maps and collect the data for the calculation of the layout. There are some additional opportunities like automated loading, saving, saving to Cloud, downloading of data, generating of tiles, and much more. The game has already thousands of servers created by the community. Some are fully made with homemade graphics. Others are more professional-looking. Featured in the editor are the controls for the movement of the vehicles. More information about them is below. Note that some keys don't work in all versions of the game. Menu Gain Ship Type A movement mode. You can use it to jump, accelerate at higher speed, and jump at a lower speed. + Special Abilities and Items Increase

You are a young man in 2056, 17 years after the termination of the technology era. No one can predict the future, but you get a fever. Perhaps it is a fever of curiosity? You have an event, and together with another person called a maid, who is waiting for you in a virtual world called the Internet, you want to know what the world will be like. Explore the past. Enjoy the present. Dare to Dream the Future. "NEXT" presents a new cyberpunk scenario, "What if everyone became virtual?" _____ Story If you can only enter the virtual world in one life, what will you do? This is a story about a guy who wants to know the future. It begins on the moon. The moon is the base of GELINDER, an in-game company that provides high-fidelity advertisements on the Internet. The two are connected through a gate that provides a link between the real and the virtual world. ... So here's the story. I leave everything behind, including a wife and son, and I go to the moon. And I enter the virtual world, for real. So it's not my goal to make money. It's my goal to see the future. This is a dream. A dream, huh. And that's also my game design philosophy. Don't ask me why. I'll leave it to fortune. After all, I'm not someone who needs to know why he is doing something. I'm just someone who wants to do. A dream? Yes, I am. I want to know the future. I want to see the new world. I'm a dreamer. I'm a dreamer. No matter how I'm asked, I don't ask "Why?" I ask "Why not?" I want to know what will happen when I dream. No matter how I'm asked, I don't ask "Why?" I ask "Why not?" So it's not my goal to make money. It's my goal to see the future. I like to dream. ----- Illustrator Illustrators are the creators of LJL's style. As opposed to comic illustrators who draw the characters, they design the characters. For example, they use the process of "looking for flat colors" and "mapping out the flow
