In order to test and fine-tune the innovation, 22 games were run on the FIFA 22 engine in FIFA, FIFA 20, FIFA 21 and FIFA 18 on multiple platforms, with four matches being recorded using different motion capture cameras. “HyperMotion Technology has been a work in progress since we first began work on FIFA 22 in 2014. In just a few years, the technology has come a long way and now it is a key game mechanic that can help players perform better in the match,” explains Jeff

Yip, Creative Director at EA SPORTS. “Once we were confident that our validation was successful, we decided to share the technology with the world. By giving fans an enhanced experience we’ve built trust with the football community that delivers a better and more complete video game experience.” The outcome of all these validation efforts has been the launch of a new feature on FIFA 18, FIFA 19, FIFA 20 and FIFA 21, bringing about a new and more authentic-feeling player model to those who have not experienced the game before. Unmatched ability Powered by the new motion capture technology, the player models are flexible and more believable. They react to the physics of the match to bring a new dimension of skill and speed to your favourite players. Experience true-to-life feeling every time you run around with your favourite players. It all starts with your player model. EA SPORTS has added artificial intelligence and physics to deliver a more playable, realistic and realistic-feeling athlete with enhanced animations, collisions, reactions, and evolutions. Your basic body is now made of 100% real-life human content. This means that your players’ faces, proportions and muscles are totally based on real-life people, with the only visible difference being the use of facial or body tattoos and hairstyles. Your player’s head will be recreated from multiple point of views to ensure a perfect and three-dimensional representation of your real-life player. The eyes, eyebrows, nose, mouth and hair will all be correctly placed and sized for your player. The nature of the game pushes the technology to its limits to recreate the way your players walk, move, run and jump. The use of dedicated animation assets makes the body movement of the characters feel like real athletes. The AI running and making decisions is controlled by in-game physics, which means that

Fifa 22 Features Key:

- FIFA Ultimate Team, the world's most popular football club management game returns for its seventh year with a new host of features, modes, improved features and user experience. Take your managerial skills and tactical eye for a side to the next level thanks to the addition of a host of new modes and the introduction of new ways to play with the footballing community.
- FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from a real-life football match in motion capture suits. This dynamic motion data is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay by varying pace, acceleration and deceleration along with the ability to flick the ball. Players' physique will also vary the amount of acceleration or deceleration along with players' ball control and receiving ability. You will have the option to select between a more pro or more casual approach to gameplay, depending on your styles of play.
- To celebrate the partnership between EA SPORTS and the 2019 FIFA Women's World Cup; FIFA 22 also introduces the second official team to celebrate the biggest sporting event on the planet: "FIFA Women's World Cup Russia 2019."
- FIFA Ultimate Team, now in its 17th year delivers on the simple yet unique game mechanic that means the most popular aspects of football remain the most challenging. In FIFA Ultimate Team you can now track and progress every single footballing memory; from the success of a lone game or penalty shootout, to the victories in the biggest single and/or international competition. All of this is tracked in your ultimate career over your lifetime where you can check how your GOATs stack up, compete against your friends and even make managerial predictions based on your career progress that will influence your fates with real players and other clubs.
- A total of eight national team kits, with four for each country represented in the EA SPORTS FIFA World Cup, designed by Gareth Bale. The kits will be available in-game on August 15th; for more information on the kits and their release, visit FIFA.com.
