File). the term in front of it are the names of individuals. This is a table. Excel is very good at displaying data in tables. It's really easy to see the layout of your table, so you get a really good idea of what you are going to be able to accomplish with this data. But you can always use a bit of code to manipulate that information. So the need for the labels is to provide specific instructions on what those cells are to be used for. You could just take whatever text you want. To that end, I typed in my question into an empty cell, and copied it across. (Your example doesn't have a question.) But if it's just you in the future typing the question, you are going to be able to use the Format > Styles option to ensure that you have a nice, all caps font there, or whatever you like. In your code, the first problem is that you don't have a `Sheets.getOutputFolder()` method. You also don't have a `Sheets.SpreadsheetApp.create()` method. Try something like this:

var html =
HtmlService.createTemplateFromFile("test.html").evaluate();
var blob = Utilities
```
